Bo the Bat wears a top hat,
rides a bike, and loves to chat.

But when Bo comes near,
children hide in fear.

Bo only wants to have some fun

and Trick-or-Treat, like everyone!

When Bo swoops down to catch a fly,
all the children let out a cry.

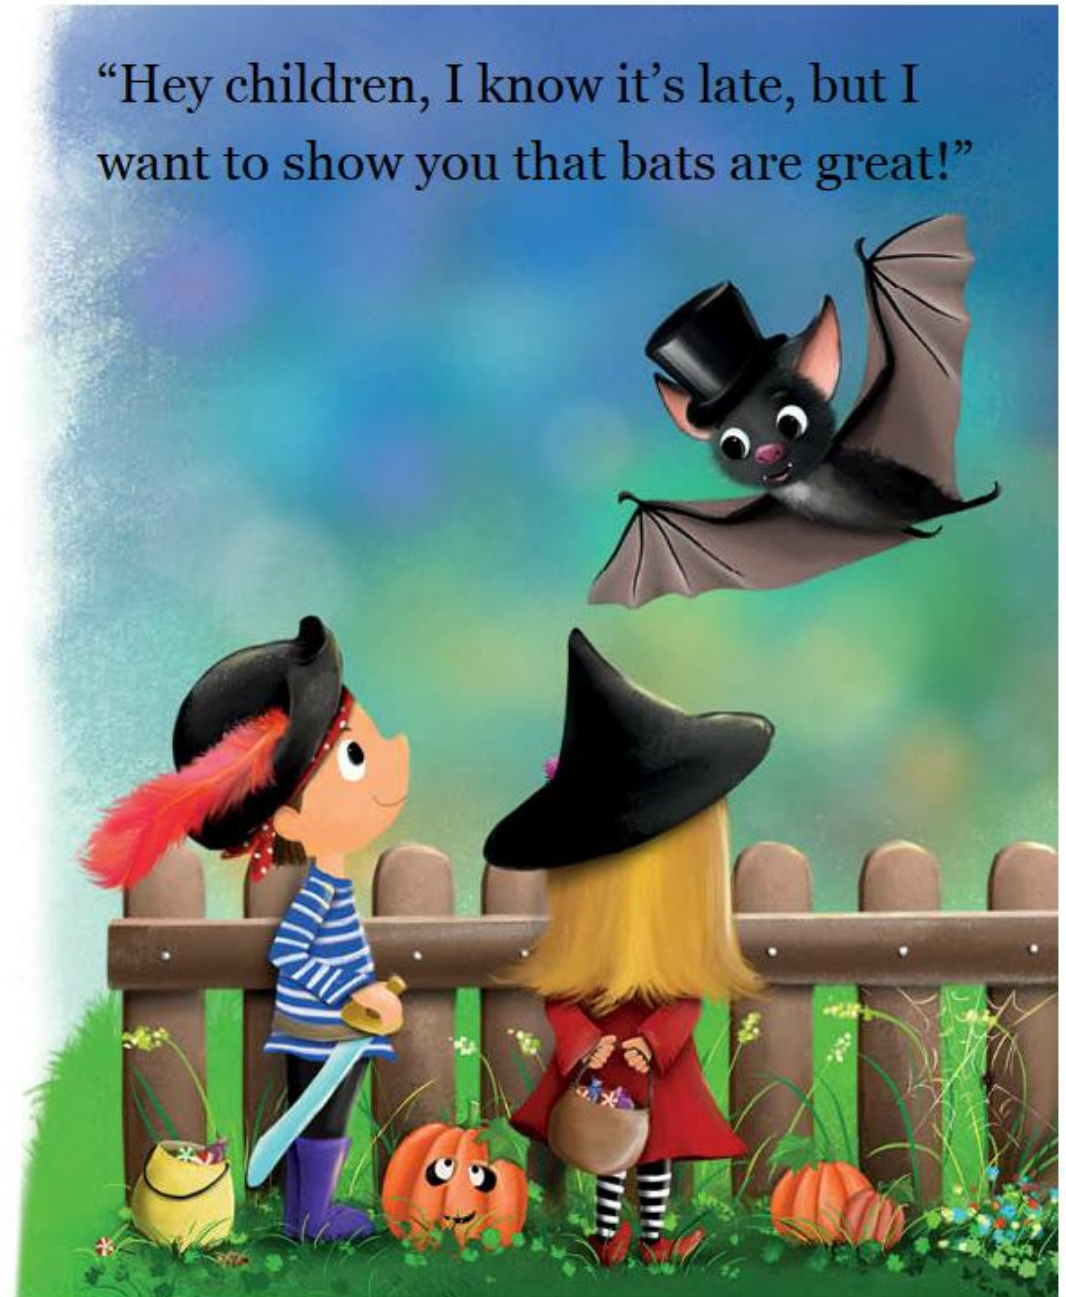

Poor Bo just wonders, "Why, oh why?"

Then Bo comes up with a plan.
“I’ll make them love me. I can!”

“We are ‘in fact’ amazing,
so look up and start gazing.”

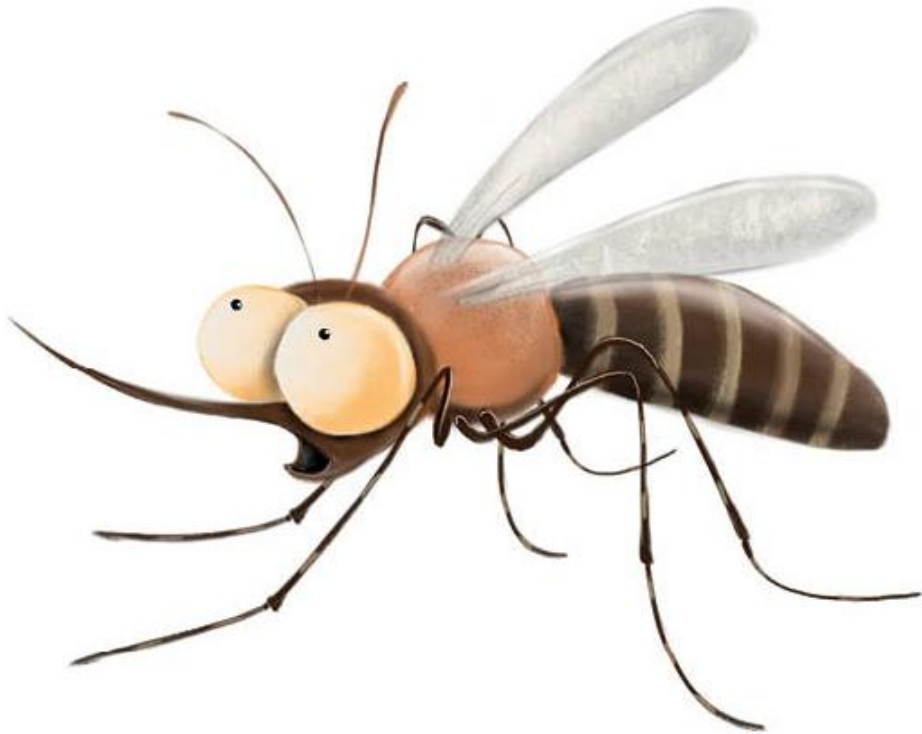

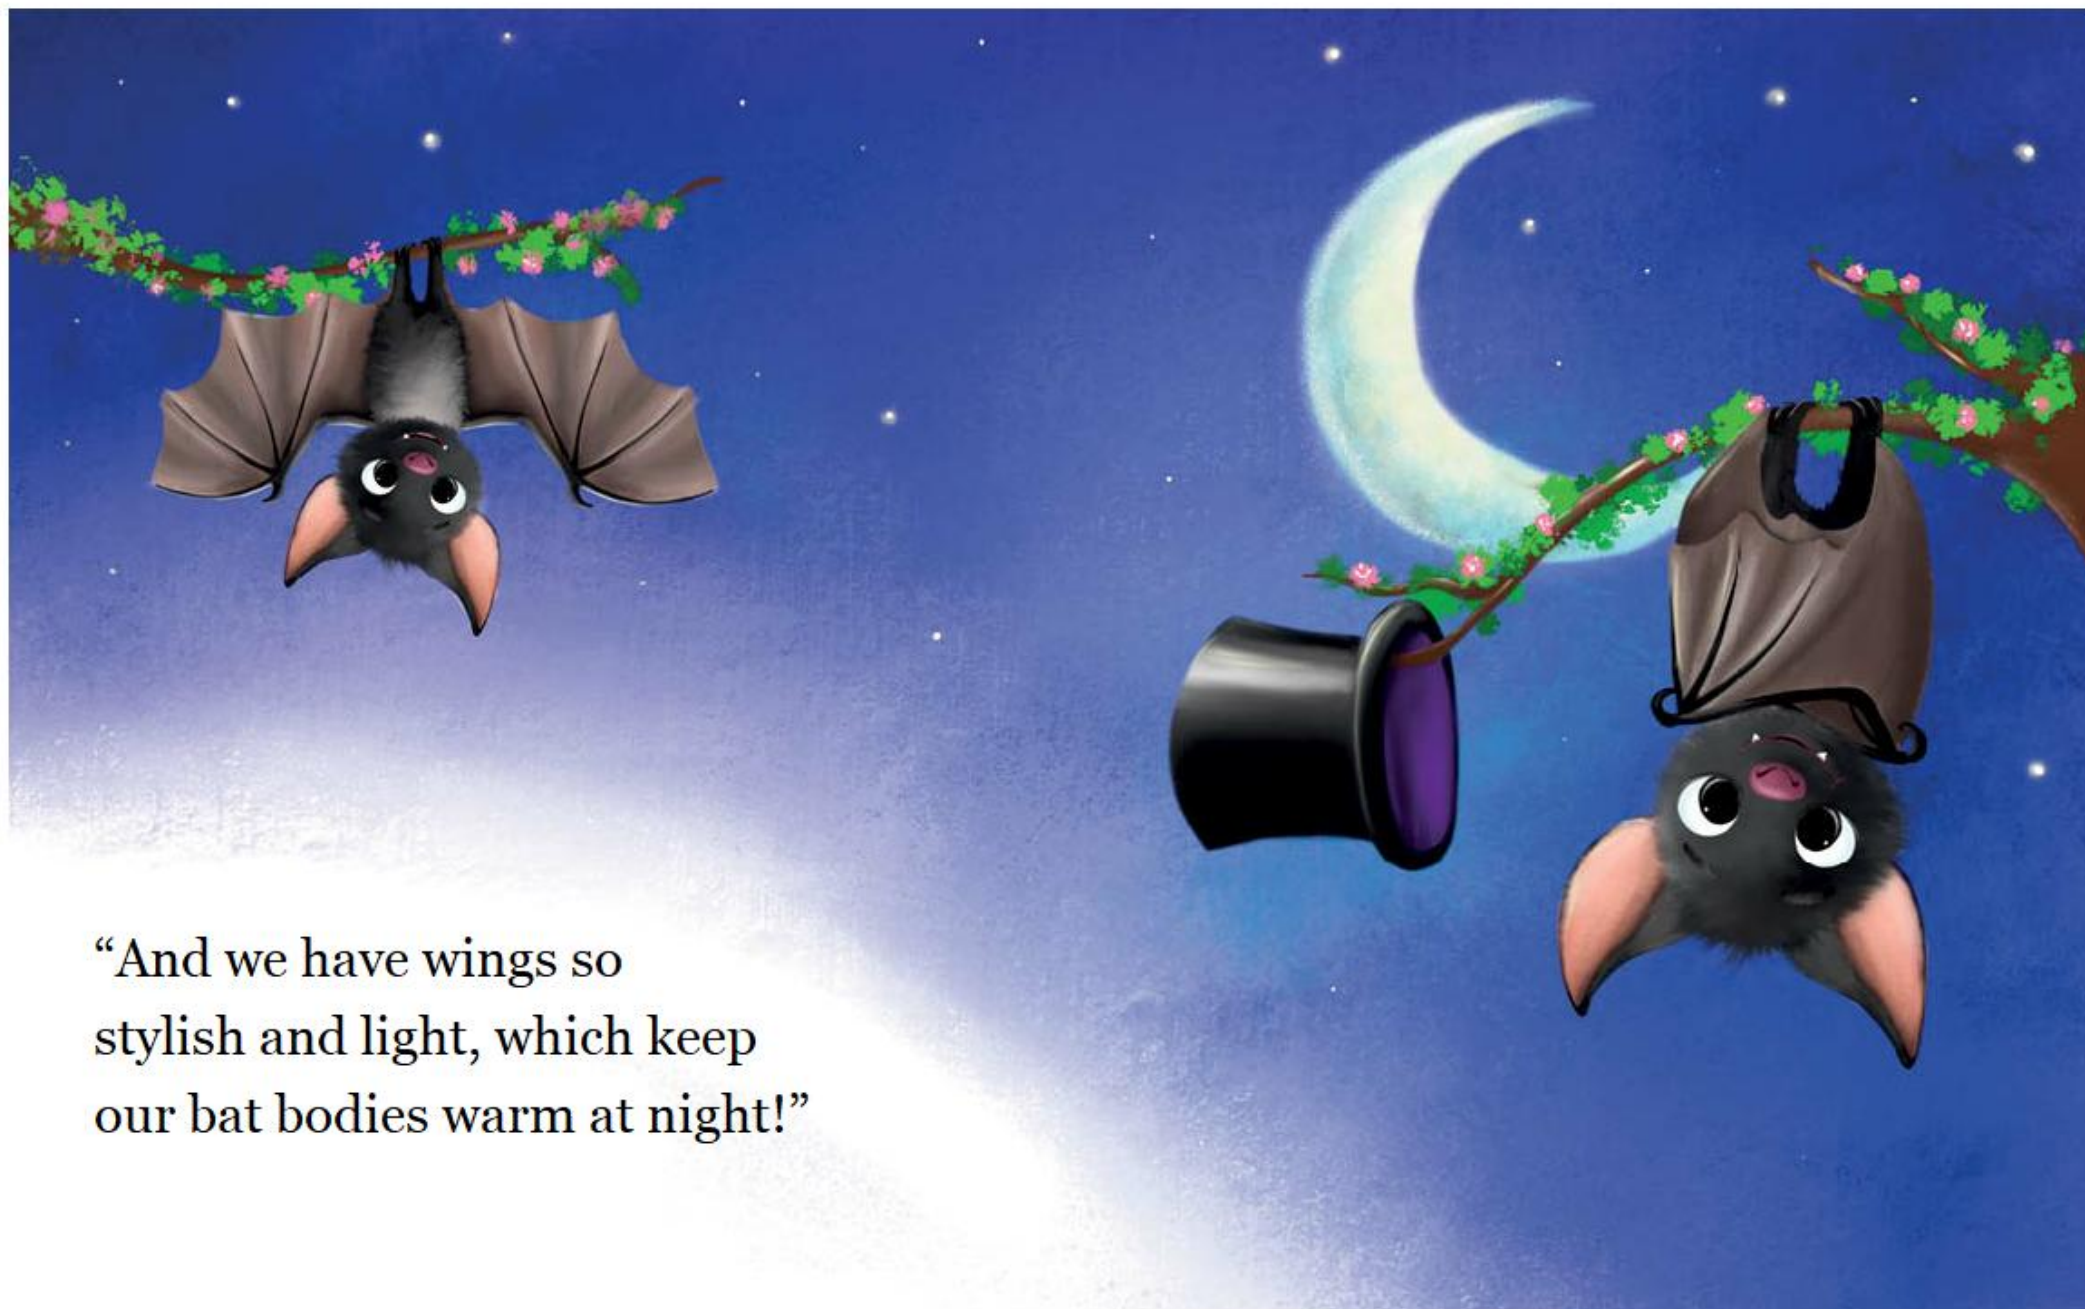

“We can see by bouncing sound off objects
in our way, now that’s pretty cool, wouldn’t you say?”

“Just like bees, we spread pollen and seeds
to grow the fruits and veggies that you need!”

“Those bugs that make you itch and scratch?
We can eat a great big batch!”

“And we have wings so stylish and light, which keep our bat bodies warm at night!”

“Bats do good things, don’t you see?
So next time you see us, please don’t flee.

Instead consider the bat a friend,
because we deserve respect in the end.”

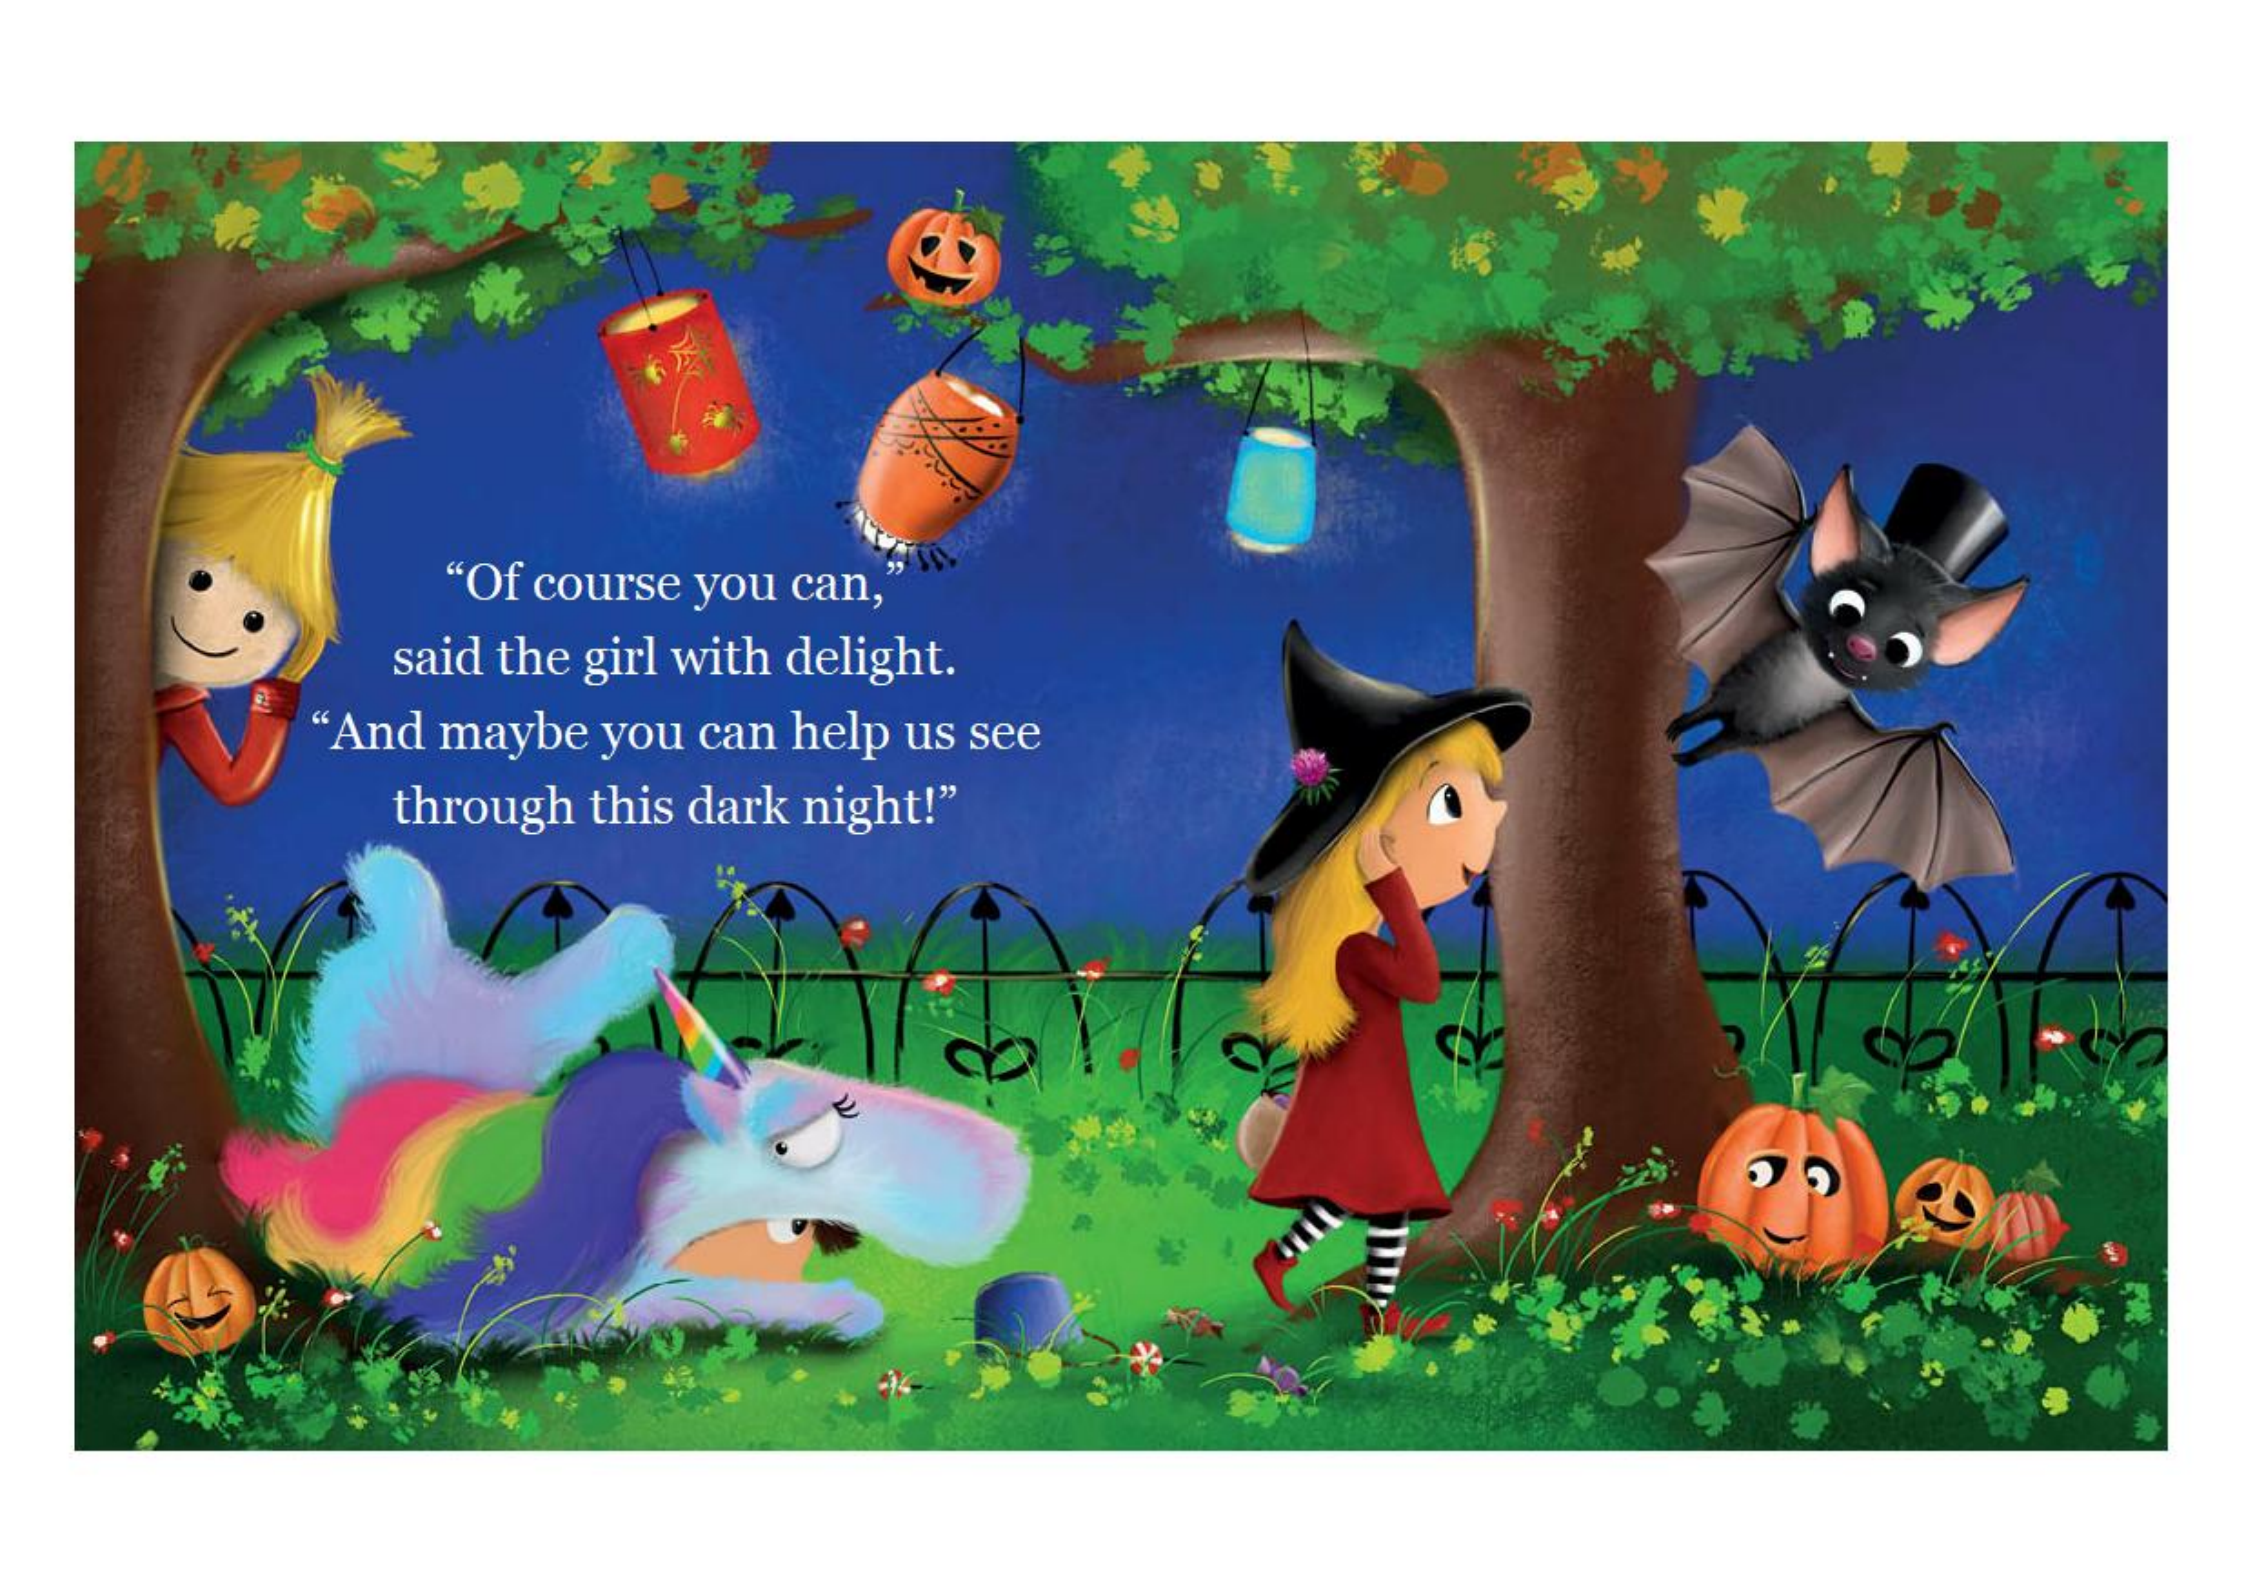

“We had no idea bats were so great”
said a little girl of about eight.

“Thanks so much for setting us straight!”

“My pleasure,” said Bo with a smile.

“Now may I trick-or-treat
with you for a while?”

A whimsical illustration of a Halloween night scene. A girl with blonde hair, wearing a red dress and a black witch hat with a pink flower, stands in a grassy field. To her left, a colorful unicorn with a rainbow mane and a purple body is lying down. To her right, a black bat wearing a top hat is flying. In the background, a large tree with green and yellow leaves stands against a dark blue night sky. Several jack-o'-lanterns are scattered around, some hanging from the tree and others on the ground. A girl with blonde hair is peeking out from behind the tree on the left. The text is centered in the upper part of the image.

said the girl with delight.
“And maybe you can help us see
through this dark night!”
